Portuguese pastries will sweeten your convention experience in 2013

After sinking your teeth into the soft, custardy center of a flaky travesseiro, you might wonder why Portuguese pastries are not as celebrated as their French counterparts. Rotarians attending the 2013 RI Convention in Lisbon, 23-26 June, will be able to sample these delights and decide for themselves.

Lisbon's Belém district offers much to see, including the Belém Tower and Jerónimos Monastery. It also has a signature sweet called pastel de Belém, a petite tart sprinkled with cinnamon and powdered sugar that, with a cup of coffee, provides a perfect break from sightseeing. Using a well-guarded recipe, a bakery called Antiga Confeitaria de Belém has made pastéis de Belém since 1837. The recipe was first created by nuns at the Jerónimos Monastery. You can find similar treats, called pastéis de nata,all over Portugal.

At Pastelaria Piriquita in Sintra, about 20 miles from Lisbon, lines snake out the door and around the block for travesseiros and a tartlet called a queijada that's filled with a mixture of egg yolk, sugar, and fresh cheese. Business is so good that a second Piriquita bakery was established nearby, a three-minute walk away. Stop by in the morning before the tourist buses arrive.

The bakeries will pack these treats to go, and some, such as queijadas, travel well, even oversea

Daredevil Rotarian no stranger to adventure

Rotarian Robert Marshall water-skis in Saint-Tropez. The captain of a bomb-disposal squad will be helping provide security services for the London Olympics.

In the early 1980s, Robert Marshall's father ran a Southampton restaurant that hosted evening Rotary club meetings. "There was always lots of laughing, and a few beers, but I never knew what they did," Marshall says.

He found out four years ago when he became a Rotarian in Chertsey, outside London. Marshall, who joined the British army at age 16, is no stranger to a life of service – or adventure. His wife, Shannon, photographed him waterskiing for the first time last year, while they were vacationing in Saint-Tropez with their three teenagers. "I consumed more seawater than I did red wine that week," he says.

In the Caribbean, he once dove off a 98-foot-high waterfall. "I didn't get a picture of that, because Shannon dropped the camera in shock." His plan for the next family excursion? A nearly 500-mile walk across the Pyrenees along the Camino de Santiago.

Risk is part of his job too: He's a captain in the Royal Logistic Corps, responsible for the welfare of 140 bomb-disposal specialists. Marshall also raises money for the Felix Fund, a charity that aids bomb-disposal personnel and their families. "When these guys are disabling a bomb, they're absolutely on their own," he says. "It's just them and the bomb, and one of them is going to win." Usually, the squadron works in Afghanistan and other countries far from home, but this summer, it's helping to provide security services for the London Olympics.

Colorado clubs create relief fund for wildfire victims

Eight Rotary clubs in District 5470 (Colorado, USA) have created a disaster relief fund to help victims of the recent Waldo Canyon wildfire, which burned down more than 340 homes and was the most destructive on record in Colorado.

The clubs will work with the local Chambers of Commerce and other nonprofit business organizations to create a consortium for businesses that were affected by the fire. Funds will also go towards other needs assessed by community leaders

The 4-Way Test

Adopted by RI in 1943

Of the things we think, say or do ---

- 1 Is it the TRUTH?
- 2 Is it FAIR to all concerned?
- 3 Will it build GOODWILL and BETTER FRIENDSHIPS?
- 4 Will it be BENEFICIAL to all concerned?
